Pastor Fred Driscoll of New Life Assembly of God of Escanaba offered the following invocation:

Heavenly Father, You are the Creator of all that is good, and we know that everything that is good and perfect comes from Your hand. We give You glory and honor today here in this chamber. We humbly come before You today as Your servants. We recognize that we need Your direction and Your wisdom. We know that all true hope comes from You, all healing comes through Your hands, and You are with us even in tragedy. You are the peace maker in the midst of chaos. You, alone, are the one who can truly unify us. You give us, and you provide for us, grace in our shortcomings.

We, today, need Your grace and Your forgiveness. Drive out darkness from our midst; remove hate and replace it with love; we need you. I pray for this Senate today, as these men and women serve our great state and nation. I pray that You would grant them wisdom in the face of difficulty and unity in the face of division. Lord God, give them the courage they need to do what is right and just in the face of opposition. Help them to overcome temptation and uncertainty, grant them strength for their families, provide for their needs, and bless each of them for their work.

I ask all of this in the name of Your Son, Jesus Christ. Amen.

The President, Lieutenant Governor Calley, led the members of the Senate in recital of the Pledge of Allegiance.

During the recess, Senators Johnson and Young entered the Senate Chamber.

Statements

Senator Warren asked and was granted unanimous consent to make a statement and moved that the statement be printed in the Journal.

The motion prevailed.

Senator Warren's statement is as follows:

I rise today in memory of Michael Lee Quinn, a talented and esteemed architect who was a constituent of mine and who had a unique and important role in preserving our beautiful, historic State Capitol Building. As I announced earlier, we are joined today by Michael's wife, Pat Scheel; his stepdaughter, Jamarie Geller; and Steve Jones, executive vice president of Quinn Evans Architects; who are in the Gallery along with Valerie Marvin, the Michigan State Capitol Historian.

Mr. Quinn was, as I said, a talented and esteemed architect. He was recognized by the American Institute of Architects with the distinction of Fellow, an honor that only about 2,500 of our nation's over-80,000 architects have ever received. Throughout his life and prolific career, he was responsible for preserving countless historic buildings in Michigan and across the country.

However, he is perhaps best known to us because of the integral role he played in the 1987-1992 restoration and 2014-2016 renewal of the Michigan State Capitol. The 1987-1992 work included the restoration of the interior of the Governor's Office, which involved conserving two original 19th-century ceilings, sourcing and installing antique lighting fixtures, replicating period-appropriate carpeting, and recreating the massive walnut doors into the Governor's personal office. In addition, he helped oversee the restoration of the envelope of the building. That project saw our iconic dome stripped and repainted and the badly-deteriorated sandstone staircases reconstructed. That renovation won several national architectural and engineering awards and, after it was completed, our building was named a National Historic Landmark.

Nearly 25 years later, he and his firm returned to continue the preservation of our Capitol's exterior. The accomplishments of that project included recreation and installation of hundreds of decorative elements missing from the dome, meticulous repointing of the exterior sandstone, and replacing approximately 200 decorative stone modillions with exact replicas sourced from the same sandstone formation as the Capitol's original sandstone.

Very uniquely, Michael Quinn found his calling when he was working in an architect's office at the young age of 13. He earned his Bachelor of Science in architecture and his master's degree in architecture from the University of Michigan, with stops along the way to spend two years serving our nation as a member of the Peace Corps in Barbados and then to study architecture at the University of Copenhagen in Denmark. After completing his education, he joined the architectural firm of Preservation Urban Design. While there, he became acquainted with David Evans, another University of Michigan alumnus, who shared his passion for urban design and the revitalization of historic downtowns. Together, they founded Quinn Evans Architects, which started as a two-person firm and expanded to be a national leader in historic preservation with more than 130 employees, and offices in Washington, D.C.; Baltimore, Maryland; Madison, Wisconsin; and both Ann Arbor and Detroit. Throughout his long career, Mr. Quinn played a leading role in many important projects; a partial list will be included in the memorial resolution that is available for your co-sponsorship at my desk today and will be on tomorrow's session's Resolutions Calendar.

Mr. Quinn is survived not only by his wife and stepdaughter, who are with us today, but also sons David and Samuel, his daughter Hannah Quinn, stepdaughter Aubree, stepson-in-law David, and sisters Patricia and Jane. Surviving him also are the hundreds of historic buildings across the state and nation that he helped to preserve and restore for future generations.

It is my honor today to recognize his extraordinary contributions to the people of Michigan and we offer our highest esteem and heartfelt gratitude. Colleagues, I ask you to join me in offering our appreciation to his family, and, perhaps as you leave this amazing building today, to take just a moment to appreciate the remarkable legacy of Michael Quinn's work here at the Michigan State Capitol.

A moment of silence was observed in memory of Michael Lee Quinn, architect and State Capitol historic preservationist.

By unanimous consent the Senate returned to the order of

By unanimous consent the Senate returned to the order of

Statements

Senators Colbeck and Kowall asked and were granted unanimous consent to make statements and moved that the statements be printed in the Journal.

The motion prevailed.

Senator Colbeck's statement is as follows:

You know, we often hear about the importance of Michigan's automotive industry, our agriculture industry, and our Pure Michigan tourism industry, but we don't talk a lot about our achievements in the aerospace industry. It is in the spirit of reconciling this oversight that I draw your attention to the east Gallery and welcome members of the Michigan Aerospace Manufacturers Association here to celebrate Aerospace Day at the Capitol—if my colleagues could please join me in welcoming them.

Now last night, President Trump proclaimed that "all Americans are dreamers," and some members of the Aerospace Manufacturers Association who convert these starry-eyed dreams into reality. Michigan has a very proud aerospace lineage. I still remember my grandpa affectionately remembering and reflecting upon his biplane rides with World War I flying ace Eddie Rickenbacker out at the airfield in Dearborn that now serves as the Ford test track. A lot of us remember Ypsilanti, which is the home of the Willow Run B-24 Bomber Plant and the home of the original Rosie the Riveter, Rose "Will" Monroe. I have actually been blessed to get to know her daughter, Vickie, who is an exceptional pilot in her own right. Rosie was one of 1,000 workers who made Michigan the centerpiece of American's arsenal of democracy. They leveraged Michigan's automotive expertise to manufacture one bomber every 55 minutes at a time when one bomber per day was the norm elsewhere in the country.

Aerospace legend Kelly Johnson from Lockheed's famous Skunk Works has Michigan roots out in Ishpeming. Kelly Johnson's team developed iconic aircrafts such as the P-38 Lightning, the F-104 Starfighter, the U-2 spy plane, and the SR-71 Blackbird. Michigan is home to quite a few astronauts as well, including my good friend, Jack Lousma, and Jerry Linenger, the brother of the Senator from the 8th District's wife, Karen.

Many of you know that my own background is in aerospace. I graduated from the University of Michigan with bachelor's and master's degrees in aerospace engineering, and I later studied life sciences at the International Space University in Strasbourg, France. When I graduated in 1988, there were frankly not many aerospace jobs here in Michigan, so I moved out of state to where the aerospace jobs were. My preference was on the space side of aerospace, so I moved to Huntsville, Alabama to work for Boeing on the International Space Station. I found it remarkable that I was surrounded by Midwest transplants. It was very easy to find fellow Michigan alumni to watch football games with in Huntsville, which begged the question: If most of the aerospace workers in Alabama were from Michigan, why weren't the jobs in Michigan? One of the reasons that I first ran for office was to fix this, and I found that I am not alone in this pursuit, and we've made quite a bit of progress.

Since 2007, the Michigan Aerospace Manufacturers Association, affectionately known as MAMA, has represented Michigan's aerospace manufacturers at industry events in Europe, Africa, Asia, and throughout North and South America, delivering the message that Michigan is open for aerospace business.

Michigan is home to over 600 aerospace firms that manufacture components, mechanisms, systems, tooling, and assembly aids for commercial, defense, and general aviation. These companies employ more than 25,000 Michiganders in good-paying career jobs. Recently, PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP ranked Michigan No. 2 in attractiveness for aerospace manufacturing investment. Michigan also has world-class academic institutions offering degrees in aerospace-related fields. Michigan aerospace companies are located in 34 out of our 38 state Senate districts. With the continued collaboration and support of government, academia, and industry, the Michigan Aerospace Manufacturers Association hopes to soon have aerospace manufacturing jobs in every one of our Michigan legislative districts.

Please join me later on today—we're going to be in the Speaker's Library—to talk to some of these fellow starry-eyed dreamers about the promise of Michigan's aerospace industry.

Senator Kowall's statement is as follows:

I rise today to echo the statements made yesterday by the Senators from the 3rd and 4th districts regarding the tragic death of Detroit Police Officer Glenn Doss Jr. As our colleagues noted, family, friends, and the city are grieving after another senseless tragedy. By all accounts, Officer Glenn Doss was a wonderful man. He has rightly been called a true hero. Mayor Mike Duggan said that Doss was "everything that is good about the city of Detroit."

The suspect in the case was a 43-year-old Mr. Brooks. He had been arrested and charged with first-degree murder, murder of a police officer, and numerous other felonies.

Officer Doss was the first officer killed in the line of duty in Michigan this year. He is the eighth officer killed in the line of duty nationwide so far in 2018—that’s almost two officers killed every duty week. That’s a startling number. In the case of Officer Doss, initial reports indicated the suspect may suffer from mental illness. That raises this question: How many murders of police officers have been the connection to a serious mental illness in the perpetrator of the crime? I’m not sure we have the answer to that question but I do know that at times like this, there are reminders that we must all do what we can to diagnose and treat mental illness to prevent needless violence.

Going forward, may we continue to remember Officer Glenn Doss Jr., and the seven other officers who were killed nationwide in the line of duty this year.
