SUMMARY:

House Bill 5128 would amend Section 68c of the State Employees Retirement Act (SERA) by allowing a retired state employee to still receive a retirement allowance if hired by the Department of Natural Resources (DNR) for wildland fire management.

To be eligible, that retirant must be hired to a position of which all of the following are true:

- Limited in term.
- No benefits are paid.
- Hourly pay is not more than 80% of the maximum hourly wage granted to a classified civil service employee employed by the DNR to perform the same duties as the retiree for the fiscal year during which the retiree is employed.

The following are already defined in statute:

Retirant means "a person who has ceased to be a member of the retirement system by reason of retirement with a pension or retirement allowance payable from the funds of the retirement system." Retirement allowance means the sum of the annuity and the pension. Employed by the state means "employed directly by this state as an employee, indirectly by this state through a contractual arrangement with other parties, or by engagement of the retirant by this state as an independent contractor."

BACKGROUND:

Generally, Section 68c requires a retirement allowance under SERA to be suspended if a retirant (retired former employee) is re-employed by the state. The allowance is reinstated after the employment ends, and the additional time spent working for the state is not counted toward that allowance.

Presently, similar exemptions exist for the following individuals under certain circumstances, including:

- Persons hired by the Department of Corrections to provide health care services to individuals under the jurisdiction of the department.
- Until Sept. 30, 2015, a person hired to provide for the custody of individuals under the jurisdiction of the Department of Corrections.
- A retired assistant attorney general appointed to that same post.

- A person the Department of Attorney General contracts with as a witness, expert, or consultant for litigation involving this state.
