Senator Mike Shirkey of the 16th District offered the following invocation:

Heavenly Father, we thank You again for this gorgeous and delightful day, for the blessings You provide for all of us, and for the provisions and protections for our families. We ask that You would continue to impart upon us the Holy Spirit and guide our decision-making at every level of this privilege of serving in this capacity in the Senate of Michigan.

“May this day be a blessing to You Lord. May this day be a blessing to You. Guide our thoughts and our words. Guard our hearts from this world. May this day be a blessing; may our work be a blessing; and may our lives be a blessing to You.”

In the Lord’s name we pray. Amen.

The President, Lieutenant Governor Gilchrist, led the members of the Senate in recital of the Pledge of Allegiance.

The bill was read a first and second time by title and referred to the Committee on Education and Career Readiness.

Statements

Senator Shirkey asked and was granted unanimous consent to make a statement and moved that the statement be printed in the Journal.

The motion prevailed.

Senator Shirkey’s statement is as follows:

I appreciate my colleagues’ and staff’s attention as I go through what I consider to be a very special sharing time and announcement. I’ll ask dear Alisha to come up here and join me for a moment, and I’ve already brought the box of Kleenex for you, so you can hold the Kleenex.

Ecclesiastes 3:3 is a pretty special verse of the Bible for me: There’s a time and a place for everything. Verse 4 is particularly pertinent for today, which says there’s “a time to weep, and a time to laugh; a time to mourn, and a time to dance.” We have a colleague—a part of the family—who has an opportunity to go spread their wings and fly like an eagle. I say that is exactly the proper time to acknowledge that there’s some sadness—to weep—also, to acknowledge that the laughter that goes with those kinds of accomplishments are those of support and encouragement; mourning a loss; and also dancing with joy for what the future holds.

Dear Alisha, we are all here—and me—to tell you that we are excited for your next adventure, but let me just talk a little bit about your background first. Step up a little bit so I can look at you and also talk into the microphone. This is a tribute that I’ll give you—I’m not going to read the whole thing—it does go through some of your background. Alisha is a Jackson native; she only lives about three and a half miles from me. On occasion, we actually ride together—commute back and forth to Lansing. One of us practices to an extreme the art of listening; the other, to an extreme, the art of talking. I will leave that up to you to determine which one you think qualifies for me and for her. She and I first met while she was the government affairs person for Michigan International Speedway. She was an aggressive, snotty government affairs person there who was very in-your-face, always looking for handouts, just typical. She didn’t quite know how to handle me because I wasn’t in favor of any of that stuff. Then one day, she asked me to say the prayer at MIS for one of the race starts, and I was happy to do so. What she didn’t tell me is that it was going to be on national television. I arrived with three days of unshaven beard and a Hawaiian shirt because I thought I was just going to be with the drivers. She still, at that time, didn't have enough grace to go find a substitute and force me to be on national TV and deliver the invocation that day. I've never quite forgiven her for that, although I got back at her a bit because the same day, she had scheduled this gorgeous, cute group of young ladies who tuned up to sing the National Anthem, and they were very good. What she told me to do was just move to the side of them after the invocation so the cameras could pan in on the ladies, and they did. What she didn't tell me, though, is don't sing. As it turned out, I was louder than the girls were so I got her back because she was very mad at me for that exchange.

I think most of you, if you've worked with Alisha, understand that she has a rather unique vocabulary. Sometimes she reaches to the visceral level of her being and I'm certain that most of that education occurred on a certain race track infield that she spent a fair amount of time on. She has been a partner, a consigliere, a confidante, never mendacious; I could always, always count on her being gut-level honest with me, even when it hurt. She has been a butt-kicker for me—not of me, well on occasion she has been a butt-kicker of me, but for the most part, I've sent her out to do some butt-kicking—a problem-solver, a very fast learner, a load-carrier—I know of few people who carry the kind of load on a day-to-day basis that she's demonstrated to me over the last few years—she's been a good cop and bad cop when we've exchanged at one another, she is absolutely a leader, she is quick to critique when it's appropriate and quick to encourage when it's appropriate. She's part of our family. We have a big family here; we each have our own small families here. She's part of our family, big and small, and over the years she's also become part of my personal family as well. Sometimes my workmate-spouse, sometimes my daughter. I can't express to you how much I appreciate our relationship and how it's grown over the years. Proverbs 27:17 is also an important verse for me—"iron sharpens iron"—and people sharpen others. Alisha, you have been my iron more than once. Some of us—none of us—are irreplaceable. Some of us may be unforgettable. I guarantee you, Alisha, that you challenge both of those statements. You're going to be hard to replace.

Some define character as the etching of one's soul, and I just wish upon all of you listening to this that you have the blessing of having somebody around you who can help etch your soul like Alisha's etched mine.

So far, I've done pretty good not crying.

Mr. President, I would ask you to ask the guests and members in this chamber and all the staff to help me recognize and acknowledge a superior member and team member of the Michigan Senate and an outstanding representative and advocate for the citizens of Michigan.
