SUMMARY:

Senate Bill 16 would amend the Housing Law of Michigan to provide that a transfer of rental property between two entities under common ownership or control is not a change of ownership for purposes of the act if the property was inspected within a certain period of time before the transfer.

Section 126 of the act provides, among other things, that a local unit of government is not required to inspect rental property unless the local unit gets a complaint from a tenant that the act is being violated. Subject to that provision, a local unit of government must inspect property regulated under the act in accordance with the act and in a manner that is both appropriate to the needs of the community and determined best to secure compliance with the act. This might include (but is not limited to) conducting inspections on one or more of the following bases:

- A complaint basis, where property that is the subject of a complaint of violation is inspected in a reasonable time.
- An area basis, where all the regulated property in a predetermined geographical area is inspected simultaneously or in a short period of time.
- A recurrent violation basis, where property that has a high incidence of recurrent or uncorrected violations is inspected more frequently.
- A compliance basis, where property brought into compliance before expiration of a certificate of compliance or a requested repair order may be issued a certificate of compliance for the maximum renewal certification period authorized by the local governmental unit.
- A percentage basis, where a local governmental unit establishes a percentage of units in a multiple dwelling (e.g., an apartment building) to be inspected to issue a certificate of compliance for the multiple dwelling.

Both of the following apply if a local unit of government inspects property on an area, recurrent violation, compliance, or percentage basis:

- The maximum period between inspections of a rental property is six years—as long as the property's most recent inspection found no violations of the act and the property has not changed ownership during the six-year period. Otherwise, the period between inspections cannot be longer than four years.
- All other dwellings regulated by the act may be inspected at reasonable intervals.

The bill would amend section 125 (which allows local units to keep ownership registries) to provide that a transfer of ownership to another person is not a change of ownership for purposes of the act if the property was inspected in accordance with the act in the previous two years (or a longer period specified by ordinance) and either of the following applies:

- The owners, trustors, grantors, or members of the transferring person are the same as the owners, trustees, grantees, or members of the recipient person.
- Both the transferring person and the recipient person are under common control.

*Person*¹ would mean an individual or a corporation, limited liability company, partnership, limited partnership, limited liability partnership, limited liability limited partnership, trust, individual retirement account, or other legal person recognized in Michigan.

The bill would take effect 90 days after its enactment.

FISCAL IMPACT:

The bill would have an indeterminate, but likely negligible, fiscal impact on local units of government. Fewer inspections would result in less revenue. However, the act requires that the fees charged for an inspection shall not exceed the actual, reasonable cost of providing the inspection. Therefore, while the bill would result in less revenue from inspections, it would also result in a corresponding reduction in costs. The bill would have no fiscal impact on state government.
