Senate Resolution No. 111.

A resolution to condemn the Russian invasion of Ukraine and urge the world community to join together in sanctioning Russia.

Whereas, On February 24, 2022, Russian President Vladimir Putin announced a “special military operation” in Ukraine. Soon after, the Russian military launched a full-scale invasion of its neighbor, including sending troops into the country and bombing major cities; and

Whereas, This unjustified invasion has already caused needless anguish and loss of life. Ukrainian soldiers have been killed or wounded, and thousands of refugees have fled to neighboring countries to escape the bloodshed; and

Whereas, The attack on Ukraine is unprovoked and demonstrates a blatant violation of the Budapest Memorandum, a 1994 agreement between the United States, Russia, and Great Britain. As part of the agreement, Russia committed to “respect the independence and sovereignty and the existing borders of Ukraine” and “to refrain from the threat or use of force” against the country; and

Whereas, President Putin has continued to demonstrate a dangerous disregard for international law and a chilling indifference to the unnecessary loss of human life. In announcing the invasion, he commented that Russia remains a powerful nuclear state and threatened grave consequences for countries that interfere with Russia’s goal. It is vital that we remain united in our condemnation of statements and actions that portend a global nuclear threat; now, therefore, be it

Senators Wojno, Chang and Barrett asked and were granted unanimous consent to make statements and moved that the statements be printed in the Journal.

The motion prevailed.

Senator Wojno's statement is as follows:

I do urge your support for Senate Resolution No. 111, as it condemns the Russian invasion of Ukraine; but I also want to take this opportunity at this time to introduce three special individuals who are here today to join us in support of this resolution. We have Walter Kozar, Andrew Haftkowycz, and Tania Smyk from the Ukrainian-American Crisis Response Committee of Michigan. If you could please stand and be recognized. Welcome to the Michigan Senate and thank you for your support today.

Senator Chang's statement is as follows:

Over 300 people have been senselessly killed in Ukraine since Russian forces invaded their country. Over the past week, we have seen images of family members grieving their losses, including the deaths of at least 16 innocent children. We have seen and heard people fleeing or attempting to flee Ukraine into neighboring countries, seeking safety and refuge, often having to separate from the young men in their families who must stay to fight. More than half a million people have fled their homes in Ukraine to escape the war. We've seen or heard about millions of people in Ukraine huddling in makeshift bomb shelters such as underground rail stations to stay safe from the explosions. We have seen tremendous acts of bravery by Ukrainian soldiers as well as Ukrainian civilians across the countryside, taking steps with whatever resources they can find to defend their country's freedom and confronting Russian troops. We've also seen brave acts of thousands of Russian people protesting the war, knowing full well they may be arrested for speaking up against their government, and indeed thousands have been arrested.

Today, the Senator from the 9th District and I offer Senate Resolution No. 111. This resolution condemns the Russian invasion of Ukraine and urges the world community to join together in continuing to sanction Russia. On February 24, Russian President Putin announced a "special military operation" in Ukraine that was anything but a peacekeeping mission. The Russian military launched a full-scale invasion of Ukraine, sending troops and bombing major cities. Too many people have been killed in this needless, unjustified, unprovoked, and senseless conflict.

In 1994, the United States, Russia, and Great Britain signed the Budapest Memorandum. Security assurances to Ukraine were made in exchange for the country giving up its nuclear arsenal, and Russia committed, "To respect the independence and sovereignty and the existing borders of Ukraine," and, "To refrain from the threat or use of force against" the country. The attack on Ukraine is a clear violation of Budapest Memorandum. And just recently the International Criminal Court has already stated they will open an investigation into alleged war crimes and crimes against humanity in Ukraine.

The ramifications of this invasion and ongoing attack are global and has brought about a global response. The United States and the world community should continue to be united in issuing and enforcing strong sanctions against Russia. All people of Ukraine, no matter their background, deserve a chance to live in freedom—and as the Michigan Senate, today we are sending the message that we stand with the people of Ukraine. We also send our support and wishes of comfort and peace to the Ukrainian-American community in Michigan as they grieve, as they pray, and as they rally for their home country.

Colleagues, I ask for your support for this resolution. Thank you.

Senator Barrett's statement is as follows:

I wanted to commend and join my colleagues in adoption of this resolution today. You know, I want to be candid and frank, Vladimir Putin isn't going to care a whole heck of a lot what the Michigan Senate does today. But it does send a message to the rest of the world that we are standing on their side and hopefully giving them some uplifting encouragement. I was really heartened to see the resolve and the steadfast resistance that the Ukrainian people have put up against this invasion.

I look at the conflicts that we've engaged in in our country over the last two decades or so, and we haven't really had willing partners to engage with us in those fights, even for their own freedom. You look at Iraq, in Afghanistan, we really haven't had willing partners the entire time—and there are certainly good people who fought alongside of us in those efforts that we had—but as we leave Afghanistan you see the country collapse into the hands of the Taliban as we're leaving or immediately thereafter. Meanwhile in Ukraine, people are digging in and fighting for the freedom and sovereignty of their own country, and I think it gives me an inspiration to think about what do I care about and hopefully you can be encouraged to think about what do you care about? What are the values you care about enough to fight and die for? Sadly, I think as we become more self-absorbed in our own culture, we lose that focus of things outside of ourselves that are worthy of our fight and even willing to die for like the folks in Ukraine who stood up to resist this.

There are other things we can do too. We can weaken Vladimir Putin by opening up energy reserves in our own country, exporting them to our European allies so that they don't rely on Russia to heat their homes and fuel their economy, and have a hostage situation by a hostile regime like the Russians are. We can get Russia off the UN Security Council—they're chairing the meeting that is taking up the consideration of condemning the actions of Russia invading a sovereign country at the exact moment that they're invading. That doesn't make any sense whatsoever. Then we can absolutely work with the Ukrainians to arm them and train them, and give them every bit of knowledge we've learned fighting insurgencies over the last 20 years to tell them what it takes to fight an insurgency against an outsize military like the Russians are. We can also give them our prayers and our support in resolutions like this that take that up as well.

The Ukrainian government isn't perfect and Ukraine doesn't have a perfect history of human rights of their own, but the best way to fix that is for Ukraine to be a sovereign country and deal with those issues themselves instead of being invaded by a hostile enemy neighbor. So I hope today that this is a small measure of support for the Ukrainian people and I am really encouraged to see this, and I hope there is more we can do as the days and weeks progress.

Statements

Senator Hollier asked and was granted unanimous consent to make a statement and moved that the statement be printed in the Journal.

The motion prevailed.

Senator Hollier's statement is as follows:

I'd like to take a little bit of a personal privilege. My grandmother turned 99 on Saturday and I'd just like to kick off Women's History Month telling my grandmother's story because 100 years ago, she never would have imagined that her grandson would have the opportunity to tell her story like this.

When she was growing up, her grandmother and her grandparents told stories of being shipped away to Native American boarding schools. She grew up in a time and a place where her history was a liability and not a strength; where her family, friends, and community did not feel comfortable teaching her about it. So much of her story was lost.

This weekend, I got an opportunity to sit down as my 1-year-old son sat for the first time with his great-grandmother to listen to her talk about what it was like growing up in rural Oklahoma, growing up in a space where her grandparents were brought to. My grandmother was born February 26, 1923, in Beggs, Oklahoma. She was born less than a year after the Tulsa race massacre, less than 40 or 50 miles away from it. Her older brothers, her family, dealt with that. Tulsa was the big city growing up and she always had memories of a learned trauma in that space and didn't feel comfortable talking about it until just the last couple of years as people, as a nation started to talk about it. She's seen five generations—she's got children, grandchildren, great-grandchildren, and great-great-grandchildren—and she's moving around and able to talk about it and share the experiences that she's had over that time. That's a lot. When she was 2 years old, she was made a citizen because Native Americans weren't when she was born. The Native Indian Freedom Citizenship Suffrage Act of 1924 was passed because Native Americans at the time enlisted in World War I at the highest per capita rate, something that continues today. That's why Native people got citizenship, because we signed up for the military, because when the bell called, we came. We signed up and said, Send me. That legacy continues.

As we talk about spaces, the legacy of discrimination continues to happen. Her husband—my grandfather—signed up to be a pilot in what was going to be the first Army Air Corps. He was fair enough that they mistakenly thought he was white. As he gets through his training and it's going fine, all of a sudden he gets kicked out because they realized he was actually a Black man. Unlike a generation of folks who sent their husbands and brothers away to fight in World War II, her husband got sent home because he was Black. That was the reality of the day and the experience that she continued to live as she grew up in a time when the Civil Rights Movement happened, when she was treated differently because unlike her brothers, her ID at birth said Indian, her middle brother said colored, and her eldest brother said white because a doctor looked at them and said, White, colored, Indian. Same parents, same doctors, same space, but that's what the documents say. That's who they are. That's the reality of the space she dealt with—women's suffrage—she raised and moved north with a generation of Black people, with people all over, because of the auto industry, because the community she was raised in and lived in in Oklahoma, there were no jobs. There was no opportunity. Instead of having no space, she came up here because her big brother had a great job at Ford. The first thing she did here was teach. She taught Head Start for years. She got her college diploma in her late 60s, and she also sent six kids to college. Could you imagine? Someone who had gotten their degree after six of their children? That's the kind of person my grandmother is, and it's just been a blessing.

I know as we think about these moments, as we think about all the spaces and the time and history, we continue to make it and she continues to do that. I'm grateful that you all let me share a little bit about my grandmother, Marcelle Douglas. Next year she's going to be 100 and we are very excited to tell that story and I hope you continue to tell the story of the folks and women, particularly this month, who have impacted our lives because we don't do it enough.
